From the moment I was born, I was told that I was too small to play hockey. I was always the smallest kid on my team, and I was often picked last. But I never let that stop me from dreaming of one day playing in the NHL.

I worked harder than anyone else on my team, and I eventually earned a spot on the varsity hockey team at my high school. But even then, I was still considered a long shot to make it to the NHL. I was too small, and I didn't have the same natural talent as some of the other players on my team.

But I refused to give up on my dream. I continued to work hard, and I eventually earned a scholarship to play hockey at the University of Michigan. In my first year at Michigan, I helped the team win the NCAA championship. And in my senior year, I was named an All-American.

After college, I was drafted by the Los Angeles Kings. I played in the NHL for five seasons, and I helped the Kings win the Stanley Cup in 2012.

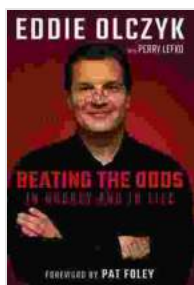

My journey to the NHL was not easy. I had to overcome a lot of challenges along the way. But I never gave up on my dream. I always believed in myself, and I always worked hard.

If you have a dream, don't let anyone tell you that you can't achieve it. If you work hard and never give up, you can accomplish anything you set your mind to.
