A Heartwarming and Nostalgic Hanukkah Tale for the Whole Family

As the crisp winter air fills with the scent of latkes and the twinkling of holiday lights, it's time to gather around and celebrate the joyous festival of Hanukkah with the beloved All of a Kind Family.

Emily Jenkins, author of the cherished Newbery Award-winning series, transports us back to the cozy brownstone home on 74th Street in New York City, where the five lively sisters—Ella, Henny, Sarah, Charlotte, and Gertie—anticipate the arrival of the eight magical nights of Hanukkah. With sparkling eyes and eager hearts, they prepare for the festivities, each contributing their unique talents and enthusiasm.

From the youngest, Gertie, who helps light the menorah with her tiny hands, to the eldest, Ella, who bakes delicious hamantaschen filled with sweet fruit, every member of the family plays a vital role in creating a warm and memorable holiday celebration. As they gather around the dinner table, sharing laughter, songs, and stories, the true spirit of Hanukkah shines through.

Through Emily Jenkins's evocative prose and G. Brian Karas's charming illustrations, we witness the All of a Kind Family's unwavering love and support for one another. They teach us the importance of family traditions, the joy of giving, and the beauty of sharing our culture with others.
