The type of flies and tackle you choose will depend on the time of year, the water conditions, and the species of trout you're targeting.

Flies:

- Dry flies: Dry flies are used to imitate insects that are floating on the surface of the water. Some popular dry flies for the Greater Yellowstone include the Adams, the Parachute Adams, the Elk Hair Caddis, and the Royal Wulff.
- Nymphs: Nymphs are used to imitate insects that are living on the bottom of the river. Some popular nymphs for the Greater Yellowstone include the Pheasant Tail Nymph, the Hare's Ear Nymph, and the Prince Nymph.
- Streamers: Streamers are used to imitate baitfish. Streamers can be effective for catching trout in the Greater Yellowstone throughout the year.

Tackle:

- Rod: A 9-foot, 5-weight rod is a good all-around choice for fly fishing in the Greater Yellowstone Backcountry.
- Reel: A reel with a good drag system is essential for fighting large trout.
- Line: A floating line is the best choice for most fly fishing situations in the Greater Yellowstone.

- Leader: A leader is a section of line that connects the fly to the main line. A 9-foot leader is a good starting point.

The Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem is home to hundreds of miles of fishable rivers and streams. Some of the most popular fishing spots include:

- Yellowstone River: The Yellowstone River is the largest river in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem. It offers a variety of fishing opportunities, from small streams to large rivers.
- Madison River: The Madison River is a tributary of the Yellowstone River. It is known for its large brown trout.
- Gallatin River: The Gallatin River is another tributary of the Yellowstone River. It is a popular destination for fly fishers targeting rainbow trout.
- Firehole River: The Firehole River is a small river that flows through Yellowstone National Park. It is known for its large cutthroat trout.
- Gibbon River: The Gibbon River is a tributary of the Firehole River. It is a popular destination for fly fishers targeting brook trout.

There are a variety of techniques that you can use to catch trout in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem. Some of the most effective techniques include:

- Dry fly fishing: Dry fly fishing is the most popular technique for fly fishing in the Greater Yellowstone. It involves casting a dry fly to a trout that is rising to the surface to eat insects.

- Nymph fishing: Nymph fishing is a good technique for catching trout that are feeding on the bottom of the river. It involves casting a nymph to a trout that is holding in a current seam or behind a rock.
- Streamer fishing: Streamer fishing is a good technique for catching trout that are feeding on baitfish. It involves casting a streamer to a trout that is holding in a deep pool or run.

If you're planning on fly fishing in the Greater Yellowstone Backcountry, it's important to be prepared for backcountry camping. Here are a few tips:

- Plan your trip in advance. Make sure you know where you're going and how you're going to get there.
- Bring the right gear. Be sure to pack everything you need for camping, fishing, and cooking.
- Follow Leave No Trace principles. Pack out everything you pack in, and be respectful of the environment.
- Be aware of the weather. The weather in the Greater Yellowstone can change quickly, so be prepared for anything.
- Be aware of the wildlife. The Greater Yellowstone is home to a variety of wildlife, including bears and wolves. Be aware of your surroundings and take precautions to avoid conflicts with wildlife.

Fly fishing the Greater Yellowstone Backcountry is an unforgettable experience. With its pristine rivers, abundant trout populations, and stunning scenery, the Greater Yellowstone is a fly fisher's paradise.
