History of the Fourth of July

The Fourth of July commemorates the signing of the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. This document declared the thirteen American colonies' independence from Great Britain.

The Declaration of Independence was written by Thomas Jefferson, and it was signed by 56 delegates from the thirteen colonies. The signers of the Declaration of Independence knew that they were taking a great risk. If they were caught, they could be hanged for treason.

But the signers of the Declaration of Independence believed that their cause was just. They believed that all men are created equal, and that they have the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

The Declaration of Independence was a bold declaration of independence, and it has inspired people all over the world. The Fourth of July is a day to celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and to reflect on the sacrifices that were made by our founding fathers.

Poems for the Fourth of July

Here are a few poems that celebrate the Fourth of July:

The Fourth of July

By Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

O beautiful! my country! ours once more!

The balmy air, the radiant sunlight pours,
And earth with all her summer-wealth is ours.
O beautiful! our country! round and round,
Brown old trees and happy homes, fields garlanded,
With flowers that thick as stars the meadow crowd.
O beautiful! our country! doubly dear
In the sweet songs of peace that charm the ear.
And the faint sound of harvest-scythes we hear,
O beautiful! our country! while the light
Floods the wide sky and fills the world with light,
So let us in our homes rejoice to-night.

The Fourth of July

By Walt Whitman

I hear America singing, the varied carols I hear,
Those of mechanics, each one singing his, as it should be blithe and strong,

The carpenter singing his, as he measures his plank or beam,

The mason singing his, as he makes ready for work, or leaves off work,

The boatman singing what belongs to him in his boat, the deckhand singing on the steamboat deck,

The shoemaker singing as he sits on his bench,

The hatter singing as he stands,

The wood-cutter's song, the ploughboy's on his plough,

The ploughboy singing as he goes to
