Brockovich was a single mother of three who was working as a legal clerk when she stumbled upon a case that would change her life forever. The case involved a group of residents who were suing a large utility company for contaminating their water supply. Brockovich quickly realized that the company was not only responsible for the contamination, but that they had also been covering it up.

Brockovich was determined to help the residents get justice, even though she knew it would be an uphill battle. She spent years investigating the case, gathering evidence, and fighting against the company's lawyers.
